Dear Learner

This Learner Workbook 1 is part of your Portfolio of Evidence for this skills development programme. You will be asked to refer to your Learner Manual every now and again. This Learner Workbook addresses Unit Standards 254183 and 264260. You will be expected to complete this Learner Workbook during classroom training. You can, however, finish most of the activities in your own time.

ACTIVITY 1.3
How stressed are you?

Aim:
• To monitor your own stress level

Tick the boxes that apply to you:

☐ Do small problems and disappointments upset you?
☐ Do the little pleasures of life no longer make you happy?
☐ Is it difficult to stop thinking about your worries?
☐ Do you feel like you are not strong enough to cope with life?
☐ Are you always tired?
☐ Do you get angry over small problems?
☐ Have you noticed a change in your sleeping or eating patterns?
☐ Do you suffer from pain, headaches or back aches?
If you have ticked several boxes above, it means that you are probably stressed. Name 3 practical things that you could do to reduce your stress.

What stresses you out? US 254183
Aims: SO 1: AC 1.3, 1.4, 1.5
- To explore the stressors in your life
- To think about ways in which you can cope with stress

Draw a picture of your own pot of water being heated on a fire. Around your picture, write or draw your responses to the questions below, which result from your own experience.

Answer the following questions:

Fire and wood

1. What aspects of your work as a supervisor contribute towards your stress levels?
2. What parts of your personality contribute towards your stress levels? (for example, wanting things to be done well, or feeling impatient when others are struggling to do something)

3. What parts of your personal life contribute towards your stress levels? (for example, things at home that you find yourself worrying about while you are trying to supervise someone)
4. What parts of your own personal history create stress and are sometimes triggered in your work?

The steam

5. What or who helps you to release stress? Explain how they help you release stress.
6. What personal values and beliefs help you to cope with this stress?

7. How does this self-awareness about your own levels of stress help you in your work as a supervisor?
